Dear Westport Families,

Thank you for your ongoing support during this unprecedented and extremely challenging time. Elementary teachers and administrators have been working to make modifications to our current distance learning plan. We are working toward designing activities and tasks that will make learning more interactive and meaningful.

On Monday, March 30, our elementary schools will be transitioning to a new distance learning plan, which is designed to address priority standards for each grade and provide regular interactions between teachers and students. Although a few details have yet to be finalized, Google Classroom will serve as our primary platform for this work.

On Thursday, March 26, and Friday, March 27, teachers will provide students with modified assignments and therefore, will only be available to students and parents from 8-11. Both afternoons will be utilized for professional development. By the weekend, planning will be finalized and detailed information will be sent to families.

We are excited to share this next phase of our distance learning plan and look forward to starting on Monday.

Sincerely,

Anthony Buono, Ph.D.
Assistant Superintendent for Teaching and Learning
